GREETINGS!

Our New Temporary Store Is Now "Wide-Open"

While we have been operating our new temporary store for about a week, it has been done under unfavorable conditions. There has been more or less confusion and disorder, but now everything is so nearly complete that we are confident you will approve of what we have provided for at least your temporary comfort and convenience.

When on that trying night in January we stood and watched our Main street store burn to the ground we could not but feel that the work of generations amounted to little, after all---and then we began to hear people say: "What shall we do without Fox's?"

Could any sentiment strike home more forcibly? "What shall we do without Fox's?" Those were the words that buoyed us up---and inspired us to make superhuman efforts to build anew and resume business. Those were the words that expressed the marked good will and unqualified loyalty of our old patrons, loyalty that money cannot

Stunned as we were for the moment by the tremendous catastrophe, we soon realized that we had a

Our first thought was of our splendid organization. We were determined that it should not be broken up. For two weeks everyone of our old force down to errand boys were paid their salaries in full and after that all of the managers and more than one half of the salespeople were kept on the payroll whether there was work for them to do or not—and right here we wish to acknowledge a debt of gratitude to these faithful work. ers. Never were employees more loval or more thoroughly imbued with the determination to overcome obstacles and keep the threads of commerce together.

We were all put to the supreme test.

We at once utilized our warehouse on Talcott street for retail purposes and in addition secured small stores here and there and stocked them, believing that any consideration of location must be subordinated to

In a very few days we were again doing business, not in the old way, but at least in a manner that was acceptable to our patrons, who assured us that "half a loaf was better than no loaf."

We shall not attempt to rehearse the details of what we did in order to complete this big temporary store—this "miracle store," as some of our friends are pleased to call it. Planned the week following the fire, it is now a complete establishment expansive, convenient, eye-pleasing. It grew day and night from the moment the first brick fell from the old Good Will Building. It grew as no other Hartford building was ever known to grow. In just 34 days from the hour ground was broken we were doing business in the north, or Church street, side of the temporary store and from all we can learn this is a record, not alone for Hartford but for the whole country.

Buying structural steel when the steel mills were oversold for a year ahead and securing labor when the labor market was a closed book meant the ransacking of the universe and an investment of no inconsiderable amount. It was a race against time—a race against odds that fairly stagger the imagination, but a race well worth winning, and, thanks to the sturdy hands that excavated, the agility of the men wno erected and the genius of the minds that directed, we won!

Our big temporary store is now complete, open and serving our trade vet in it you will find none of the earmarks of the proverbial temporary store. It contains no less than 52,000 square feet of floor space and has the air of a store that was planned with deliberation and constructed without thought of economy of time.

All of the departments of the old store are amply housed in it except those of Furniture, Rugs, Draperies, China, Glassware, and Housefurnishings, which will remain in the large branch store, No. 12 Talcott Street, until the new eleven story Main street building is ready for occupancy. Everything is new—the buildings, the stocks, the showcases and all the other fixtures. Everything spells permanency and solidity. There is a fine big rest-room with all conveniences for the tired shopper- and many other attractions that the old store did not contain.

We are consciously proud of what we have accomplished in a few short days, and now that the tense strain is over and we find our organization intact and working with a will to give our patrons what they want, we pause to marvel at what has been done -for what has been done has indeed been well done.

This "miracle store" is not a matter of cheap veneer and glitter and glare. You will agree that it is a good store. It is a guarantee of good service for our patrons during the few mouths that will intervene until our new Main street store, our permanent home the consummation of over 70 years of honest endeavor to satisfy our patrons—is a reality.

Our Main street establishment was destroyed by fire on January 29. The winter season was practically over and spring was many weeks ahead. Much of our spring buying had been in progress for some time—and what was not already bought was bought without delay. There were no interruptions in buying whatever—no cancellations—therefore our spring and summer stocks are now as complete and attractive as they would have been had we not suffered the loss of our Main street store.

When you come here today and the days that follow you will "feel at home". Familiar faces will greet you and serve you—and the same accommodating spirit - the straightforward, honest endeavor to please you, satisfy you - the service that prompted you to say "What shall we
