PARSONS THEATER

With the summer season just closed t the Parsons Theater, preparations for the regular fall and winter season are well advanced, due to the fact that the stay of the Opera Players was extended far beyond the regular time. Opening about the middle of ember last year, the theater has been running continuously ever since, of nearly eleven months, which is unusual for a theater playing legiti-mate attractions. But little work will have to be done to put the play house in first-class shape for the regular season, as the house was done over from pit to dome two years ago.

Manager H. C. Parsons said yesterday that his regular season of 1917-18 would open about September 10 and that the house was booked solid until December 24. The bookings are more numerous and better than they have been in some time, as New York had an unusually big quota of successes last year which will be sent on the road this year, and Hartford gets practically all of them.
