SOME FACTS ABOUT OUR BAGPIPE BAND

Twenty-five per cent of the players in the local bagpipe band, familiarly known as the "Kliffas Band", are now engaged in the task of helping their Uncle Samuel win the war for world democracy, and to that end their local organization is handicapped by the war. Manager Thomas Webb is desirous of enlisting the interest of any young men locally who would like to learn the pipes and become members of that body.

It may be noted in passing that men who join the bagpipe band do not have to buy either bagpipe sets or Highland uniforms. These are all bought and paid for by citizens of this community as a manager Webb is holding all such property subject to the use of the local bagpipe band. When a member of the band is called to the colors, or for any other reason leaves town he is not permitted to take either the bagpipe set or the Highland uniform with him.

This arrangement leaves the local organization at all times equipped to outfit the necessary number of players to give full rank. The regulation military bagpipe band is composed of 15 pipes, 6 snare drummers and one drum major. Manager Webb is the base drummer of the local bagpipe band and right well he knows how to whip up a band. His work is one of the spectacular features of the band when on parade and always attracts the interest and admiration of the spectators.

It may be of public interest to state that the Highland uniforms worn by the members of the local bagpipe band cost $61.00 each. They are American made, which of itself is an innovation. Until the advent of the present war all such uniforms had to be imported from London or Scotland.

The bagpipe sets are made of South African black wood, with full silver and ivory trimmings. They cost $20.00 the set. The entire equipment owned here for the bagpipe band cost a total of $1,700. This sum was all raised by private subscription and by means of a public fair, which realized the sum of $250. This demonstrated the popularity of the organization and the wish of the public to have a bagpipe band located here.

Manager Webb served three years as base drummer in the British Army where he learned under competent masters the art of whirling the drum sticks in artistic manner. He also had considerable gymnastic practice on the other side, and his skill in swinging the Indian clubs did him yeoman service when he came to manage the art of base drummer in a bagpipe band. Manager Webb also served three years in Company G, but in a limited classification.

He is presently employed by the regular training of the privates, mastering the manual of arms, drills, maneuvers, tactics, etc. He has been in South Manchester for the past 11 years. He is presently employed by the Prudential Insurance Company of New York in the local office.

The local bagpipe band was organized some five years ago. For one year they had to bring an instructor here from Massachusetts once a week, for the purpose of giving the men instructions in playing the "chapters" of the bagpipes. This was indeed a rare treat for the large audience. The program heretofore published in these columns was rendered in full, with the single exception that the regular training of the privates was not included. Unless they can show cause why this condition existed they will be brought before the United States officials in Hartford and receive the proper attention for such negligence or indifference.

A large new flag has been provided this week for use in front of the local War Bureau. It is kept floating in the breeze every day from sunrise to sunset and marks the scope of many activities in conjunction with war matters.

Eskeel Benson of Main street has been serving for years faithfully and efficiently with the G. E. Keith Furniture Company. He operated the Ford automobile going over the route each week making collections, sales, etc., and has had rather a strenuous time. For some months his physical condition has not been up to standard. His physician insisted that he must quit work for a time and endeavor to build up his weakened energies. He is not however, ridden nor bedridden but must for a time at least seek rest and change of outlook and activity.

Albert Bidwell of Hyde Park, Mass. was the guest of his parents, Albert F. and Mrs. Bidwell of Laurel street over the week-end. He is employed as traveling freight agent for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company with headquarters at Boston. His brother, Howard Bidwell of Winchester, Mass., is freight claim agent for the Boston & Maine Railroad Company with headquarters in Boston. Howard has been in the employ of this company for more than 14 years. He is married and has two daughters. He was home for a short visit with his parents the preceding week.

RECEPTION FOR MISS STARKWEATHER

A reception took place at High School last Monday evening in honor of Miss S. "OUTWITTING THE HUN"

By Lieutenant PAT O'BRIEN

LIUTENANT PAT O'BRIEN

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Introductory. Pat O'Brien tells of his purpose in writing the story of the Hun.

CHAPTER II.—Tells of his entanglement in the Royal Flying Corps, his training in Canada and his transfer to France for duty.

CHAPTER III.—Describes fight in which he brought down two German airplanes and was wounded in the process.

CHAPTER IV.

Clipped Wings.

The hospital in which I found myself on the morning after my capture was a private house near the front.

In all, the house contained four rooms and a stable, which was by far the largest of all.

over to him, but he shook his head and said, "If this was San Francisco I would take it, but I cannot take it from you here." I was never able to understand just why he refused the apple, for he was usually cordial and in good fellow to talk to, but apparently he could not forget that I was his enemy. However, that did not stop one of the orderlies from eating the apple.

One practice about the hospital impressed me particularly. That was, a German soldier did not stand much chance of recovering sufficiently to take his place again in the war, the doctors did not exert themselves to see that he got well. But if a man had a fairly good chance of recovering and they thought he might be of some further use, everything that medical skill could possibly do was done for him. I don't know whether this was done under orders or whether the doctors just followed their own inclination in such cases.

My teeth had been badly jarred up from the shot, and I hoped that I might have a chance to have them fixed when I reached Contrail, the prison where I was to be taken. So I asked the doctor if it would be possible for me to have this work done there, but he very curtly told me that, although there were several dentists at Contrail, they were busy enough fixing the teeth of their own men without bothering about mine. He also added that I would not have to worry about my teeth; that I wouldn't be getting so much food that they would be put out of order.

My condition improved during the next two days, and on the fourth day of my captivity I was well enough to write a brief message to my squadron, reporting that I was a prisoner of war and "feeling fine," although, as a matter of fact, I was never so good as I felt. I realized, however, that if the message reached my mother in Muncie, Ill., and I did not want to worry her more than was absolutely necessary, it would be better for her to know that I was a prisoner. She would not have to know that I was wounded.

I had hopes that my message would be carried over the lines and dropped by one of the German flying officers. They told me that the message was put in at Gibraltar, after leaving England at that time, and that they were sure it would be carried. They also said that they were sure it would be carried.

DEATH ON GALLONS

Modern German Pirates Deserve Fate of Buccaneers of Old.

Sailors Serving on United States Merchant Marine Today Know Man Who Remembered Fate of Spanish-Norwegian.

Stories of piratical methods employed by German submarines commander in burning undefended merchant vessels and in treating defenseless crews are no novelty to thousands of mariners on the Atlantic coast, such as are now enrolling for service in the new merchant marine.

Some of these sailors, who are to man the emergency fleet of merchant ships being constructed for the United States shipping board to take supplies to our armies in France, actually know men who suffered at the hands of the last pirates of the Spanish main, whose methods were similar to those of the Germans.

Among the men who reported for duty as mates recently at the recruiting headquarters of the shipping board were some from the Massachusetts coast who had known a survivor of the last ship taken by Spanish pirates of the Caribbean. This was Caleb Thomas Fuller of Salem, who died in 1808 at the age of ninety-four.

Captain Fuller was able seaman in the crew of the brig Mexican of Salem in 1822 when, laden with saltpeper and tea, with $20,000 in silver stowed away in the cabin, he sailed from her home port for Rio.

On August 20, near the coast of Cuba, the schooner was held by a vessel, described as "a long, low, straight topped schooner of about 150 tons, painted black," which had been sent to sea about a month ago with his papers.

The boat was sent, and came back in charge of an ill-looking armed crew of pirates from the Spanish main, who drove the crew of the Mexican to sea, fastened down the hatches, and began looting the vessel. Finding the silver, they sent it aboard their own ship.

The pirates next cut the sails and rigging of the brig to pieces and started a fire in the galley which they expected would soon destroy the brig. They then departed for their own vessel, and sailed away in search of other victims.

But they had neglected to fasten down the cabin skylight. Through this the brig's captain crawled, and, finding to the fire, splashed water on it until he had it in control. He then caused it to smother heavily until the enemy was out.

The crew retorted the vessel, and favored by a gale made their escape from such a dangerous neighborhood. Sailors today recall with satisfaction that the long arm of justice meted out to the pirates.

Some months later a Salem vessel was in the harbor of St. Thomas, when a low, black schooner anchored before the dock. The Salem captain, suspicious, and inventing an excuse went aboard the schooner for a call. He found a crew of pirates, and a black which he recognized as belonging to the Mexican.

That night the stranger left the harbor, but the Salem captain notified a British man-of-war captain of her character.

A few months after the British brig-of-war Curlew caught the black stranger in the Nazareth river, a sailing locality on the west side of the island. She had made her way to the shore and was being used as a warehouse for contraband goods.

The pirates were conveyed to Boston for trial, and found guilty of the attack on the Mexican. Their captain, Pedro Gilbert, assumed innocence and the aid of an injured merchant. He was found guilty, with four others, in sentencing the five to death. Joseph Story used language that re-echoed the words of the condemned men: "And in bidding you, as far as I can presume to know, an eternal farewell, I offer up my earnest prayer that Almighty God may in his infinite mercy bestow goodness and mercy on you souls."

How They Became Gamblers. It has been asserted in Paris Fliegro to discover, in the American slang-dictionary, the "true" origin of the term "Sammy" as expressive of an American. "Tommy," says the Christian Science Monitor, was the name of a certain Lieutenant Miller who was manager of the mess. The fare included some formidable sandwiches of bread and molasses. Only the cake who had consumed six of those substantial sandwiches in succession was allowed to hear the translation of "Sammy." All of which sounds like a very plausible attempt, on the part of the French public, to distinguish credit for the copious which was made up of bread and molasses.
