

MURPHY BROUGHT HERE AND CHARGED WITH MADDEN MURDER

HABEAS CORPUS PETITION DENIED BY FEDERAL JUDGE HAIGHT

Extradition Papers Honored By Governor Edge of New Jersey Hearing Continued to March 6th.

MRS. WM. BESSLER COMES TO VISIT HUSBAND IN JAIL

Francis Murphy of Hoboken, N. J. wanted by the State Police for being implicated in the murder of Captain W. F. Madden, the Cheney mill guard in South Manchester on the night of January 30, was brought here Tuesday afternoon, given a hearing before the local court and his case continued until March 6th.

Murphy was arrested three weeks ago in the round up at Bessler's saloon in Hoboken. He fought to secure his release from the clutches of the law in New Jersey, claiming he was in Hoboken on the night of the murder. In the session of the Federal Court in Newark, N. J. last Monday Murphy swore that he had never been in Connecticut and also that he was in Hoboken on the night Captain Madden was murdered. He also swore that he was in Hoboken on January 25, two days previous to the murder and he had witnesses who substantiated his claim.

State Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn and Captain Robert J. Harley of the Connecticut State Police, produced affidavits showing that Murphy was in South Manchester on January 28, and Federal Judge Haight had more faith in the evidence produced by the Connecticut officers than he did in that proffered by Murphy and his witnesses. The judge therefore denied Murphy's application for a release on habeas corpus proceedings.

After the application was denied by Judge Haight, Governor Edge of New Jersey was notified and he immediately honored the extradition papers asked for by Governor Holcomb of this state. The necessary red tape was gone through with and Murphy, in charge of Captain Harley was brought to Connecticut. Captain Harley with his prisoner, and also Chief Egan and State Policeman Sullivan arrived at the local police station shortly after 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. It was thought best not to keep Murphy here over night. Therefore a hurried call was sent for the town court officials and Murphy was given a hearing. Owing to the fact that it was not generally known when the prisoner would arrive there were few who even knew that the hearing had been held until it was all over and the prisoner had been taken to the Hartford jail.

Murphy was placed on the stand and the complaint charging him with the murder of William F. Madden was read by Prosecuting Attorney Hathaway. Murphy was not represented by counsel, and at the conclusion of the reading of the warrant, Prosecuting Attorney Hathaway asked him what his plea was, "guilty" or "not guilty." Murphy replied in a firm voice "not guilty." After entering his plea, Prosecuting Attorney Hathaway asked that the case be continued until 3 o'clock in the afternoon of March 6th, stating that he expected important witnesses but would be unable to present them before that date as some were out of the state. The court continued the case as recommended by the prosecutor, until March 6th, without bond.

Deputy Judge Robert E. Carney was on the bench and conducted the court proceedings.

MRS. BESSLER ARRIVES
Mrs. William Bessler, wife of one of the men now awaiting trial for the Madden murder and who is in the Hartford jail, arrived here Tuesday afternoon shortly after three o'clock. She was accompanied by another woman who was unknown to the local police officials.

They reached the police station just as the state policemen arrived in an automobile with Murphy. State Policeman Harley recognized Mrs. Bessler and went over and spoke to her. She enquired for her husband, stating that the last she heard of him was that he had been brought from Hoboken to Manchester. Captain Harley informed her that her husband was in the Hartford jail, and as the state police car was to return to Hartford in a few minutes invited Mrs. Bessler and her friend to ride back to the city in the automobile. The invitation was accepted and the two women got into the machine and remained there while Murphy was being given his hearing in the Town Court room. After Murphy's case had been continued he was brought out to the waiting automobile. Mrs. Bessler was asked to sit in the front seat with the driver of the car and the other woman and Captain Harley and Murphy occupied the rear seat.

The woman in the rear seat knew Murphy and started a conversation with him as soon as he had taken his seat in the machine.

Mrs. Bessler is the mother of four children, the oldest of whom is seven years and the youngest was born last November. It is stated that she was unsuccessful in seeing her husband at the county jail. She is the only woman who has appeared and asked to see her husband. Miller of West Haven, Klein of Hoboken and News of Hoboken are married men. McDonnell and Murphy are said to be single.

Building Prospects Vanish
In so far as we have been able to learn from men in this place who are engaged in the building trades, the outlook for new buildings here is not at all attractive. Several of the builders with whom we have conversed on this subject state that they have not a single order on their books. They are not even asked to furnish figures on proposed buildings for the coming season. The prohibitive prices of all kinds of building materials are given as the prime reason for having the "Nothing Doing" sign displayed on their shop windows. They are early looking forward for better things but nothing of that cheering character arises before their vision up to date. It is stated that they are worked hard incessantly in all sorts of weather but they have heavy burdens to carry. They are also despondent for the reason of the delivery service in this city. ROLLING SUCCESS OF JOLLY MASQUERADE

Largest Throng St. Mary's Young Men's Club Ever Assembled

The annual masquerade ball of St. Mary's Young Men's Club at Cheney hall last evening attracted the largest gathering which has ever attended one of these popular events. Miss Ada Von Dook of Trotter street was awarded the prize for wearing the handsomest costume. She wore a riding habit of yellow silk, which proved an easy winner. Harold McLagan of Main street carried off the honors among the men, his monkey representing a monkey and his antics helped him win. AMERICANIZATION ENTERTAINMENT

An entertainment was given at High School Assembly Hall Wednesday evening under the auspices of the local Americanization committee. The large hall was filled and all enjoyed the very delightful event. The committee put in much careful and intelligent effort in planning, preparing and executing the different numbers. They had searched the field carefully for suitable persons to enact the several roles. The matter of costuming was a large and difficult problem. It was carried through with ability, taste and good judgment. The persons taking part had been carefully drilled as well as suitably reeled. There were eighteen numbers presented. All were well pleasing to the assemblage and vociferously applauded.

The variety of costumes and colorings and designs met in an admirable manner the requirements of the nationalities represented. Admission was free and all were cordially invited. The responses with reference to character representation on the stage and attendance at the exhibition were most gratifying to the management. The following program was pleasingly and effectively carried out:

ACCEPTS THE CHALLENGE OF PEACE LEAGUE

President Says There Is Common Agreement That a New Order Must Be Set Up in the World.

Addressing an Enthusiastic Audience in Boston Declares He Is Not Prepared to Report Details of the Paris Conference on So Short a Notice—Our Great Country Is Trusted Abroad.

Boston, Feb. 24.—President Wilson today accepted the challenge of those who oppose America's entrance into a League of Nations, and he said: "I have no doubt of the blood that is in me. I have come back to report the verdict of America in this matter that I have doubt of the blood that is in me. I have come back to report the verdict of America in this matter that I have doubt of the blood that is in me."

Addressing an enthusiastic audience, which crowded Mechanics Hall this afternoon, he said he was not prepared to report details of the Paris Conference on so short a notice. There is a common agreement, he said, that a new order must be set up in the world.

"The greatest thing I have to report to you," he said, "is that our great country is trusted throughout the world. The settlements of this war affect every great and, sometimes I think, every small nation in the world. No one decision can be made without it."

not there to assert an individual judgment of his own, but to try to assist the cause of humanity. "And in the midst of it all every interest looks out, first of all, when it reaches Paris, the representatives of the United States. Why? Because, and I think I am stating the most wonderful fact in history, because there is no nation in Europe that suspects the motives of the United States."

The President's speech follows: Governor Coolidge, Mr. Mayor, Fellow Citizens: I wonder if you are half as glad to see me as I am to see you. (Applause.) (A voice: "You bet"). It warms my heart to see a great body of my fellow citizens again because I know that you are here during the recent months I have been very lonely indeed without your comradeship and counsel and I tried at every step of the work which fell to me to recall what I was sure would be your counsel with regard to the great matters which were under consideration.

I do not want you to think that I have not been appreciative of the extraordinarily generous reception which was given to me on the other side, in saying that it makes me very happy to get home again. I do not mean to say that I was not very deeply touched by the cries that came from the great crowds on the other side. But I want to report to you in all honesty that I felt them to be a call of greeting to you rather than to me.

I did not feel that the greeting was personal. I had in my heart the overflowing pride of being your representative and of receiving the plaudits from the great crowds. It was not a tone of mere greeting. It was not a tone of mere generous welcome. It was the calling of comrades to comrades, the city that comes from men who say, "We have waited for this day with the friends of liberty who come across the sea and shake hands with us as they find a new world constructed upon a new basis and foundation of justice and right."

I have held so many grounds for pride on the other side of the water that I am very thankful that they are not grounds for personal pride, but for national pride. If they were grounds for personal pride, I'd be the most stuck-up man in the world. And I have been an infinite pleasure to me to see those gallant soldiers of ours, of whom the constitution of the United States made me the grand commander. You may be proud of the Twenty-sixth Division, but I commanded the Twenty-sixth Division (laughter and applause) and see what they did under my direction—and everybody praises the American soldier with the feeling that he will take to me with gratitude from the credit of no one else.

I have been searching for the fundamental fact that converted Europe to believe in us. Before this war I did not believe in us as she does now. She did not believe in us throughout the three years of the peace, but she began to believe in us because we were holding our own because we thought we could make more by staying out than by going in. If it is a matter of a few months, the whole world is reversed. There can be but one explanation for it. They are now wishing for my part never to be had America play any part whatever in the fighting for their homes. In the first instance, but for a cause, the cause of human right and justice, and that we went in not to support their national claims, but to support the great cause which they held in common. And when they saw that America's only held ideals, but acted ideals, which they converted to America and became firm partisans to those ideals.

I am a group of scholars when I was in Paris. Some gentlemen from one of the Greek universities, who had come to see me, and in whose presence, rather in the presence of those traditions of learning, I felt very young indeed. And I told them that I had had one of the delightful reverses that comes to a man. All my life I have heard men speak with a sort of condescension of idealists, and particularly of those separated, unclassified persons whom they choose to term academic, who were in the habit of utopian ideals in the free atmosphere where they clash with nobody in particular.

And I said I had had this sweet revenge. Speaking with perfect frankness in the name of the United States, I have uttered as the objects of this great war ideals and nothing but ideals, and the war has been won by that inspiration. Men were fighting with tense muscle and loved head until they came to realize those things, feeling that they were fighting for their lives and their country, and when these accounts of what it was all about reached them from America they lifted their heads to the sky and said, "Heaven! then they saw men in black coming across the sea in the spirit of crusaders, and they found that they were fighting a reckless, reckless of danger, but only reckless because they seemed to see something that made that danger worth while."

Men have testified to me in Europe that our men were possessed by something that they could only call a religious fervor. They were not like any of the other soldiers. They had a vision, they had a dream, and they were fighting in the dream and fighting in the dream they turned the whole tide of battle and it never came back.

One of our American humanists, members of the articles that American soldiers were not trained long enough said: "It takes only half as long to train an American soldier as any other, and that is because you only have to train him to go one way and he did only go one way and he never came back."

Men were turned back upon the bitterness of disappointment, but only, but the bitterness of despair. All nations will be set up as hostile camps against each other, and they will go home with their heads upon their breasts, knowing that they have failed—for they were blinded not by their own pride, but by the fact that they did something more than a treaty of peace.

Men will be turned back upon the bitterness of despair. All nations will be set up as hostile camps against each other, and they will go home with their heads upon their breasts, knowing that they have failed—for they were blinded not by their own pride, but by the fact that they did something more than a treaty of peace.

All nations will be set up as hostile camps against each other, and they will go home with their heads upon their breasts, knowing that they have failed—for they were blinded not by their own pride, but by the fact that they did something more than a treaty of peace.

And now you realize that this confidence in us has been established throughout the world. It is a burden upon us—I choose to call it a burden. If one of those burdens which are upon us ought to be laid upon us, I think I am stating the most wonderful fact in history, because there is no nation in Europe that suspects the motives of the United States."

Test Man's Sentiment. I invite him to test the sentiments of the nation. Let this nation up to make men free and we did not come our common and purpose to America, and we will make men free. If we do not do that all the fame of America would be gone and all her power would be dispersed. She would then be to keep her power for those selfish, provincial and narrow purposes to which she is so prone to give.

Here to Report Progress. And so, my fellow citizens, I have come back to report progress, and I do not believe that the progress is going to stop short of the goal. The nations of the world have set their heads now to do a great thing, and they are not going to slacken their purpose. And when I speak of the nations of the world I do not speak of the governments of the world. I speak of the people who constitute the nations of the world. They are in the saddle and they are going to see to it that if present governments do not do their will, some other governments shall, and the secret is out and the present governments know it.

Felt at Home in Europe. There is a great deal of harmony to be got out of common sense. There is a great deal of sympathy to be got out of living in the same atmosphere, and except for the differences of languages, which puzzled my American ear very much, I could have believed I was at home in France or in the streets, when I was in great halls where men were gathered together irrespectively of their own countries.

Do you believe in the United States as I do? Are you going to set up Poland, Lithuania, Latvia, as yet unrecognized, and leave setting up a circle of armies around her? Do you believe in the aspirations of the Czechs, Slovaks and the Jugos? As I do, I do not know how much you would be quick to pounce upon him if there were not the guarantee of the world behind their liberty. Have you thought of the sufferings of Armenia? You pour out your money to help the Armenians and let me set up my own strength so that they shall never see you again.

The arrangements of a present, but I should secure a good interpreter was like witnessing the compound fracture of an idea. But the world guarantee them. The world guarantee them. The world guarantee them. The world guarantee them. The world guarantee them.
