Experienced men must know livestock buying with a knowledge of weight, price, the amount and quality of meat the live animals will yield.

Each manufacturing operation must be done with expert skill and scientific precision A highly perishable product must be handled with speed and care to avoid loss.

Chemists, engineers, accountants, and other specialists are required to take care of our intricate problems.

Alert wisdom and judgment must be used in getting stocks of goods into the open channels of demand through our four hundred branch houses. Branch house organizations must show activity and energy to sell at the market in the face of acute competition from other large packers, and hundreds of small ones.

All these requirements of intelligence, loyalty, devotion to the task, are met in the personnel of Swift & Company. Yet the profit is only a fraction of a cent per pound with costs at minimum.

How can the workings of this delicate human mechanism be improved

> British Labor Unions Coming to Realize That Practice They Adopted Was Wrong.

The Rt. Hon. W. Adamson, the labor leader in the British parliament, questions whether the so-called "law of supply and demand" is the controlling factor in business. He believes, says Leslie's, it is the productivity of labor. This confirms the opinion of that eminent journalist of London, formerly of New York, Pomercy Burton, that the chief error of Britliberate policy of restricting output legs set well apart and straight, plumsaving machinery, while the more efficient American workmen advocate an opposite course. Mr. Adamson's conclusion is in line with that of President W. C. Tengle of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey. He believes that the true value of labor is the wealth that it produces, and the less it pro community. As long as counsel for The Tribune was hammering him Mr. Ford sat quietly in the witness chair answering the constant fire of questions with great patience. But the instant his own lawyers took him in hand his attitude changed. He became selfconscious and diffident. He would not accept the efforts of his counsel to provide him with an opportunity reveal the full extent of his patriotic work during the war, his humanitar an views, or his advanced ideas of the relations which should exist between capital and labor.

"It is all in the records," said M

The witness did, however, after be ing pressed, explain that his son had bough: out the minority stockholder of the Ford Motor company because these interests had insisted on Mr Ford squeezing the last dol'er out of the public, the government, the wor ers and the product. He wanted to cut loose from his associates, he said so that he could carry out his idea of the distribution of profits to an ployees through increased wages and to the public through lower prices it was either buy or sell and Mr. Ford had considered selling and organizing a new company. His son, however took up the task of buying out the minority stockholders and succeeded. despite the general belief in the finan clal world that this stock could not be purchased.

ments of Mr. Ford's testimony cam makers had nothing to do with hi own interests. It was a curious bi of interest. It was shown that when the automobile business was in the first years of its growth all manufac turers of motor cars were compelle to pay tribute to what was known as the Selden patent on internal combustion engines. Mr. Ford fought this patent for seven years and won and hy bis victory freed the entire industr from its shackles and made possible lerful growth which has mary ed the last few years.
