Modern Military Men Have Figured That Goliath Never Had a Chance to Wir.

Popular sympathy has always been to the side of David in his little bickering with the Giant Golinth. It ought to be quite the other way, because there never was a minute when Goliath had a chance against an agile antagonist who could choose his own position and distance, and who was emipped with a long-range weapon. This is a problem which has been thoroughly worked out by modern military men and naval tacticians. A fight of the kind can have only one re-
