HOW BRAVE SONS OF ZEALAND HELPED MOTHER COUNTRY.

-War imposes many sacrifices upon a nation engaged in it, and civilian life necessarily is disturbed. The United States will have to share with other belligerents the inconvenience incident to the conflict. But if anyone is inclined to feel discontented, he should take the trou ble to note what has been done by New Zealand since the be ginning of hostilities. That dominion, though under no legal obligation to aid England, has raised an army of more than 100,000 men. Her population is 1,500,000. Since New Zealand has had a compulsory service law, she has drafted a large number of married men, both with and without children. The dominion has raised $130,000,000 in domestic is a tool with many edges, and none war leans. A finance act was recently adopted which empows ers the government to fevy on siduries amounting to more thin $3,500 a year, and to take drastie and fur-reaching measures in order to raise money, Maori tribes have uncomplainingly furnished large quotas of men to he near. The whole country in short was determined to belt vigorously to carry the war b a successful finish.

Canada and Australia have been no less unselfish in supporting the war. The wholebearred and entirely voluntary vertions of the British dominas furalsh an inspiring examde to the American people When Canada, Australia, and New Zealand made such sacrifices for Great Britain, Americaus might even more cheerful ly endure hardships for their own country.
