Discovery of the Compass. Ancient Chinese records would seem to give the use of the magnetic needle for determining direction a long and varied history. The principle of the compass, or as the Chinese call it. the south-pointing charlot, is stated by most Chinese authorities to have been discovered during the reign of Chong Wang, 1185-1179 B. C. The discovery was forgotten in a few hundred years. Then the philosopher Chang Hong, who died in 139 B. C. reconstructed the device. In succeeding troubles his model was lost and forgotten. From the third century A. D. onward great interest we lusions in old writings to the mysterious south-pointing chariot. Attempt after attempt was made to solve the riddle, and then we read in writings lore might wake up after dreaming of a shroud with a feeling that he had seen an evil omen and be, consequently, depressed in spirits. He would be quite wrong. A shroud may not be altogether a pleasant thing to see in one's dreams, but it is accounted y nearly all the soothsayers to be a avorable omen to dream of that greeome object. For one thing such a dream signifies that you are to inherit some money. It is true, though, say the wise ones, that seeing a shroud in dream is a warning to the dramer o take better care of his he ... or he will have a fit of illness which will interfere with his business.
