Composition of Ration Rather Than Method of Feeding Influences Egg Production.

Experiments in the methods of feeding laying hens show that the composition of the ration rathe. ... uan the method of feeding has the greater infuence upon egg production. The tests were made at the Ohio expert ment station.

Rations for laying heas should con tain from 10 to 12 per cent of meat scrap or a good grade of digested tankage, or their equivalent in skills

The wet mush has some disadvan tages, it is found, as it requires some time each day to prepare and give the mash and may cause digestive disturbances in the fowls if too much is fed A satisfactory ration consists it feeding a grain infature of corn, three parts; oats, one part, by weight, and for the dry mash ration, ground corn seven parts, bran 3 parts, meat scrap five parts. About twice as much grain as mash should be consumed.

PRESERVING EGGS IN BRINE Good After Eight Months if Simple Measures Are Taken-Lime Good

as Water Glass. Eggs laid during April and May are of better quality for preserving than are those laid later in the summer. One pound of air slaked time added to cooled, boiled water is equally as good a preservative for eggs as water

Only clean, fresh eggs with sound shells should be "put down." Use an earthen jar. Stir the lime thoroughly into the water and drop the eggs in as gathered. Some time settles to the bottom of the jar but does no harm. Two or three inches of the solution should cover the eggs to allow for evaporation. Keep la a cool place, oreferably in a cellar. Eggs preserved by this method may be safely kept for eight months. When ready for use, remove only the eggs
