POTATOES

Just a word to the man who is to plant Potatoes next year. We urge everybody to place their orders for seed potatoes with us at once, to enable us to govern our purchases accordingly.

There are just two things to be considered-If potatoes are cheap fewer are plantedthe other that the Maine seed growers are finding that their stock is rotting and will not keep and are disposing of it as fast as possible in New England as eating stock at the present time. Consequently, why are we not right in the belief that Potatoes are bound to sell for more in the Spring of 1921? Years of experience has proven to our old customers that they have always made money by ordering their seed in the fall.

We have already purchased 60% of our requirements and are taking orders for spring delivery. If our experience in the seed business is of any value to our customers we hope they will take it for what it is worth, but we know that additional purchases will cost us more.

Mail or 'phone us your order at once.

THE WOODS BY DOUGLAS MALLOCH

There's some of us has this goods,
An' some of us has none-

But all of us has got the woods, An' all has got the sun. So, settin' here upon the stoop, This patch o' pine beside,

I never care a single whoop—

Fer I am satisfied. Now, take the pine on yonder hill: It don't belong to me; It's there fer me to see. An' 'twixt the ownin' of the same An' smellin' of Its smell,

I've got the best of that there game,

An' so I'm feelin' well.

The boss in town unrolls a map An' proudly says, "It's mine." An' he den't smell no pine. The boss in town he figgers lands In quarter-sections red: Lord! I just set with folded hands An' breathe 'em in instead.

talking about ambition.

I went shopping, so I carried an umbrells. I had to go to the basement of a department store, and when I had finished and had come upstairs heard considerable tittering around me. Upon looking up I found myself to be the center of attention. Trying to discover the cause, I found I had raised my umbrella when I came up from the basement and was parading through the store perfectly unconscious of the comical spectacle I was making.-Chicago Tribune.

He illustrates his point by the case of Detroit. One reason, he says, why Detroit attracts so much tourist travel is that it advertises itself so pleasingly, and it really has a cherm which is appreciated by none quite so much as by Detroit. The only way you can "Why, man, we're building four new get anything but enthusiastic culogy hospitals and eight dispensaries in our of the place, he says, is by yourself pretending a violent infatuation for it. The writer in question has discovered nothing new and it is not impos sible that he might find Indianapolis also an illustration of his theory, for its citizens are sometimes given to "knocking" when they talk about this city to visitors. They will mention some of its good features, but will offset them by calling attention to the things it does not, but should, possess.

The visitor may notice these lacks by himself if left alone, but he may not, and it is poor judgment to bring them to his notice. The old saying that the best should always be put forward is as applicable to a city as to an individ ual. The mother of a defective child endeavors to draw attention to his merits and away from his defects, and the policy is good as to a town. If fault must be found make it to persons as much interested as yourself in seeing improvement made. Let the stranger go his way with the feeling that the residents like their home city
