THE ROMANCE OF WORDS "CABARET."

ROUGHT into prominer of late years because of th arge number of hotels and resaurants which have advertised dancing cabarets" or "jazz sharets" or have used the term as indicative of a place when one can secure food and amuse pent at the same time, "cab ret" has come to be regarded as a new addition to the Englanguage—a word which rom its form and pronuncia tion, is evidently French. As a matter of fact the term was originally of Galfic origin, but it is by no means modern having been widely used in Eng-land during the Sixteenth cenory as a synonym for "tavern." ere was nothing musica t the cabarets of this period forded was that which travelers furnished. While word was used by Bramhall one of his works published in 685, it passed out of the lan guage soon after that and did return again until about the aiddle of the Eighteenth cen

It has changed its meaning so much of late that, if a hotel advertised a "cabaret" and did not provide at least an orchestra, it would be accused of fraud-while as a matter of several centuries of custom it would be entirely within its rights.

Building Bungalow Towns. In London, as in America, the shortage of homes has resulted in a remarkble expansion of bungalow land. On Canvey Island, for Instance, homes built chiefly of wood, concrete slabs or, most common of all, corrugated iron are being run up in all directions. ood many folk are building their own homes, camping meanwhile in tents; others have resorted to converting omes. What prices are like on the tained may be guthered from the fact that a concrete bungalow of four rooms is officed for sale at £600, a pantechnirany van for £75.

reply would apply with equal force to you and others in your own community whose interests depend upon the growth of your community. For isn't that precisely the situation with many communities whose commercial organizations are doing nothing toward "selling" the community in a practical manner because the time is not ripe for a big campaign for funds for a survey of resources? Between that senseless form of "town boosting" in which so many cities indulge on the one hand, and the scientific survey which calls for a considerable fund on the other, there ts a happy medium which few communities have attained. So much so-called community promotion is a concoction of lack-of-plan and meaningless superlatives.

Yet in every community that is capable of healthy growth there are certain things which should be perpectly obvious to those in the city whose interests would be enhanced through development work.

Application of the simplest business methods would discover them, and the community would cease to grow more or less by accident and local people would no longer be called upon to invest, from time to time, in this, that or the other enterprise that has been lured into a community where it does not belong by a bonus that is as silly to accept as to offer.-From the Na

PUT WASTE PLACES TO USE Good Idea During the Winter to Plan for Improvements to Be Made

Next Spring. Every city, village and hamlet has the total of a great area of land which is not only non-productive, but which is rendered hateful to the sight and deterrent to the vicinity, as a haven for rubbish and a breeding place for nexious weeds. These waste areas and the unbeautiful spaces commonly denominated as back yards, as rule, are not fit for garden work in their present condition. But this condition readily can be changed with some intelligent exertion. The addition to this unpromising soil of manure, of the fallen leaves from trees, and, sometimes, of ashes sifted from the furnace, soon renders t workable and productive. For a time the co-operation of the community officials might be necessary as a means of encouragement, but each such even greater benefit would lie in the improved morals of the community, in the cultivation of habits of industry on the part of the young especially, and in the beautifying thrift and beauty are the rewards waiting thes communities which whole-heartedly and intelligently cultivate in the people the natural garden instinct. A national propaganda in this direction

Young Trees in Winter. All very young trees require some attention the first winter; after that they will be established and be able take care of their own welfare. Therefore, all recently planted trees will be benefited by the hilling of a sound of earth around them, tramping it very hard. This keeps the tree from recking with the winter winds. If this precastion is not taken with new ly planted stock the trees are apt in swaying back and forth to work a hole around the trunk which reaches clear down to the roots, and it is often fatal to the newly planted tree. A row of silver maples, one of the easiest of all deciduous trees to transplant, for lack of this precaution were all killed during last winter.
