Obituary

James McGowan died suddenly of heart disease at his home, 185 Center street, Tuesday evening about eight o'clock.

Mr. McGowan had practically no warning that death was by his side. He looked over his shoulder and passed away before medical aid could be summoned.

Mr. McGowan was a native of Ireland but came to South Manchester when a young man. He was one of the oldest Irish Catholics residents here.

Mr. McGowan was a native and life long resident of this town. Some two years ago he was incapacitated from work owing to Bright's disease.

THIRTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

South Manchester Division Sons of Temperance was organized on February 11th, 1886, in the building occupied by the South Manchester Public Library there located on Wall street and later destroyed in the school fire, October 25, 1918.

The anniversary observance has always been a notable event. This year it was held at the home of the Worthy Patron of the Division, Mrs. Selma Wright Nixon, at her home in Waverlyfield. Mrs. Nixon was married recently and now resides in that town.

The celebration was set for Saturday evening, February 13th, and a large number of members of the Division living in Manchester, Rockville and Hartford, were present in goodly numbers. Mrs. Nixon's home is an old colonial mansion, with large fire places and ample room.

The evening's festivities were concluded with a presentation on behalf of the Division of a handsome silver cake plate as a wedding gift to Mr. and Mrs. Nixon by E. L. G. Hohensthal, who has been present at all of the thirty-five anniversary celebrations.

THE NEW MILL END SALE!!

We emphasize the "NEW" for the reason that the Mill-End Sale of today is in many respects different from the Mill-End Sale of former years. For instance, the first Mill End Sale was mainly an offering of short-ends of yard goods, odds and ends, etc. To-day it is a most comprehensive sale, embracing many special purchases from the mills and manufacturers, and to make it all the more interesting, much of our own regular stock is included at Mill-End sale prices, which accounts for the general use of Mill-End sale tickets throughout the store, and, wherever you see a Mill-End sale ticket, you are sure to find a real, worth while, money-saving bargain.

New Flash Light Traffic Guides

Are Now In Use Here. Some Interesting Particulars Regarding Their Operation, Etc.

Last Wednesday evening the new automatic flashlight signal traffic guides were set in operation for the first time at Main and Charter Oak streets and at Main and Center. These modern devices supplement the old guide signals where red lanterns were displayed nightly.

In stormy weather it frequently occurred that the gale extinguished the lights and thus put the old traffic guides out of commission for the time. It became necessary on such occasions for the patrolmen to re-light the lanterns, on discovering that such action was called for.

The new system is not subject to any such conditions. The lights are placed within a large globe surrounding an iron pedestal and stand some five feet high. They flash a white light which gives the appearance of distant and noiseless lightning on a sultry summer's night. Standing in the business section of South Manchester both flash lights can plainly be seen.

There is no chance for any sane and sober driver of a vehicle colliding with the new traffic guides. Their reticulating attracts attention and makes them readily discernible after off from stationary lights of any sort. The standards are set on solid concrete bases raised some twelve inches above the street level. The white glass globe are adorned by a Paris glass globe. The new device give an intermittent scintillating flash light at the rate of 30 flashes each minute. They are adjusted mechanically and serve for many months and night without requiring any other attention. The large globe is recharging.

The large globe is recharging. The machine cost $100 each. They are now in use in Hartford, East Hartford and other places and are giving excellent satisfaction.

TWO YOUNG WOMEN MILLINERY STORE IN PARK BUILDING

Miss Alice Hooley and Miss Vera Treble will open a millinery store in Room 10, Park building as soon as necessary arrangements can be made. Both young women have lately been employed with the J. W. Hale Company. Miss Hooley especially has been engaged in the millinery department for the J. W. Hale Company for a goodly number of years. She is a young woman of large experience in the millinery line. She knows that branch of industry well. Miss Treble, while not so long in the business, is not a novice by any means. Her experience has been ample to enable her to do her share towards making their combined venture a success. Both young women are natives of South Manchester, have lived here all their lives and are well and favorably known. They are ambitious to make a success of their undertaking and will do all they can to merit a portion of the millinery trade of this community.

GOING DOWN THAT'S FINE

The price of coal in this town has been brought down to $16 the ton in pleasing information for householders and others who use the product. The change is now in effect. It includes stove, chestnut and egg sizes. Coal cost can now be had here for $14 the ton. The continued mild weather has saved many dollars for New England householders on the single ton of coal. Even at present rates the cost of that fuel is much higher than it should be. The only good reason we know as to why the price of that commodity are kept so high is that profiteers somewhere believe they need the money and are getting it while the getting is permissible.

SPECIAL MEETING OF SELECTMEN

The board of selectmen will hold a special meeting at the Hall of Records next Monday evening to act on the petition of residents of Russell street extension for the acceptance of that street. The acceptance of Russell street will also come before the board for a hearing on the same evening. The town fathers will probably have down their decision on the matter of sidewalks and curbing for Russell, Lilly and Orchard streets, hearings on which were held last week.

Obituary

DAVID TAYLOR
David Taylor died at his home, 224 Center street, last Friday night. The funeral took place Monday afternoon. Services were conducted by Rev. G. G. Scrivener, pastor of the South Methodist church. Burial was at the East cemetery. Mr. Taylor is survived by a widow, by one daughter, Mrs. Holgarbych, by three grand children, and by two brothers in Ireland. Mr. Taylor was 71 but a short time. He lived in South Manchester for the past 25 years.

ALVIN DROWN

Alvin Drown died last Friday evening at his home on Spruce street after a lingering illness from a complication of complaints. The funeral took place Monday afternoon at the residence of Rev. Chester Austin of the Protestant church. Burial was at the East cemetery. Mr. Drown had lived in South Manchester for the past eight years. He was formerly a train dispatcher at the Union station and resided in Hartford. He leaves a widow.

Captain Frank L. Pinney of the United States Navy has been summoned to report for duty at Washington, D. O. the first week in March.

He is to serve there as assistant chief of the Ordnance Bureau of the U. S. Navy Department. This assignment will keep him on land and give him a chance from time to time to see persons from his hometown. He has spent considerable of his time for the past few years in the Canal Zone and in the south seas generally. He was in command of the Cresgar, Cleveland. The change will doubtless be quite agreeable to him.

Sheridan and Cumberland

The story is told of Cumberland that he took his children to see "The School for Scandal" and when they laughed roared them, saying that he saw nothing to laugh at in this comedy. When this was reported to Sheridan, his comment was, "I think that confoundedly ungrateful, for I went to see Cumberland's last tragedy and laughed heartily at it all the way through."—Henry A. Byers in "The Connecticut Wits and Other Romances."

Captain Frank L. Pinney of the United States Navy has been summoned to report for duty at Washington, D. O. the first week in March. He is to serve there as assistant chief of the Ordnance Bureau of the U. S. Navy Department. This assignment will keep him on land and give him a chance from time to time to see persons from his hometown. He has spent considerable of his time for the past few years in the Canal Zone and in the south seas generally. He was in command of the Cresgar, Cleveland. The change will doubtless be quite agreeable to him.

Sheridan and Cumberland. The story is told of Cumberland that he took his children to see "The School for Scandal" and when they laughed roared them, saying that he saw nothing to laugh at in this comedy. When this was reported to Sheridan, his comment was, "I think that confoundedly ungrateful, for I went to see Cumberland's last tragedy and laughed heartily at it all the way through."—Henry A. Byers in "The Connecticut Wits and Other Romances."

THE QUILT LEGACY

By DORA LEFAVOUR.

(Copyright, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Joshua Pristin lacked the business acumen of his ancestors, and when he died the home which had passed down his line for generations was his only legacy to his two daughters.

The city came. Massive buildings towered menacingly above Miss Esther's wee shop, and homes of modern architecture grew around their weather-beaten home, till the staves fell shored side-by-side into their respective, old-fashioned corners by the busy, self-seeking, bustling throng; and her little shop became Miss Esther's life, and home an oasis in a wilderness of people, most of them with foreign accents in their speech and foreign methods in their ways; while Miss Lucretia rarely ventured beyond her well-kept garden.

Miss Esther patriotically, conscientiously, sold her prewar stock at pre-war prices, and the alarming post-war repudiations bit into her narrow margin as keenly that one evening, when she locked her store, she thought that upon the twenty-fifth day of this bleak November there'd be little to make her and her sister thankful.

As she walked the two city blocks to her home, her step was unbalanceably sedate, her pulse as perfect as if the world were at her feet; yet, her heart was so tumultuously furious that she closed the door with its shining brass knocker quickly, almost with a bang—as if to shut out the grasping, gliding, up-to-date six o'clock throng; and the poisonous grievances of her day flamed to the soft fronton of her sister's black silk as Miss Lucretia came down the hall to meet her and announce dinner, just as she had done every evening of every business day for the twenty years which Miss Esther had been the breadwinner.

After they'd eaten their toast, Miss Lucretia carried the tea things to the dining room, while Miss Esther turned the oil lamps economically low.

"Either," confided Miss Lucretia, before a blazing wood fire in the open grate, "this is the last of the tea. The butter's gone, and there's only one more rising of bread flour in the barrel, and all is sold that can be sold without everything going under the hammer."

"But her's sigh sweeten her fat bosom," Esther's dull—extremely dull, Lucretia, she confided in her turn. "People advise advertising, but I shrink from flouting my store wares through the distant newspapers, and I fear its rent will use all my capital this month."

"Miss Dorney was in today—she's opening a tea room, and if I could match this china she would commission me to decorate her place."

"It would put us quite on Easy street," she continued, fingering the bright-based sample she took from her skirt pocket.

"Let me see that, Esther," Miss Lucretia held out her hand. "Seems to me I've seen some just like it somewhere."

"Probably when you were a child," Miss Esther replied vaguely. "If I could match it anywhere it would be at Val's in Boston, but its price would be exorbitant—quite prohibitive. No, it's no use—the game is not worth the candle."

"I think I'll retire, sister," Miss Esther said wearily very early in the evening. Miss Lucretia opened she, too, would go to bed.

Each took a small lamp and silently climbed the shadowy, creaking stairs. Miss Lucretia's brow wrinkled in memory-searching frowns.

"Where in the world have I seen china like that?" she kept asking herself.

"Either," she muttered, "don't you remember Aunt Anstice Delbar's legacy?"

Straight to an old brass-studded hair trunk they sped, simultaneously opened the creaking lid and dragged a bulky quilt from the place where it had lain untouched for twenty-five years.

Down in her room, Miss Esther, the reserved, the self-contained, lighted a lamp with eager, trembling fingers, and compared the sample flutteringly. Miss Lucretia also held it far off and near to her dim vision.

"They agreed—it matched."

"The just got to get a scissors and rip it off now," said Miss Esther, "and measure it before I can sleep a wink."

The sharp-pointed scissors soon gave a vent; she slipped her fingers through the opening to hold her work the better. They touched something crisp; she ripped faster, her faded blue eyes protruding as the crispness proved to be a dollar bill. She gasped, and slipped her hand in farther—more crispness.

With trembling haste they clipped them off, and placed them in neat piles—two thousand of them.

Neither spoke; the moment was too tense, too freighted for speech. Simultaneously they dropped to their knees beside Miss Esther's bed in reverent thanksgiving.

Presently practical Miss Lucretia arose and, putting on her slippers and dressing gown, went down to the kitchen to get hot-warmers.

By the time she got back Miss Esther had the money safely stowed away for the night and the two old ladies quietly went to bed again, with their busy feet rattled snugly against warm suspensives, and their hearts glow with gratitude to some sainted Aunt Anstice and her china quilt legacy.
