Indirect Lighting Is Best for the Eyes

Not long ago we substituted the electric and gas light for the old-fashioned coal oil lamp. We think we have wonderful lighting systems. Ac-cording to Forrest Knapp of Colorado Agricultural college, the glare due to the use of the incandescent lamp is so great that it may counteract all of the good effects of increased intensity of illumination, Did you ever notice any discomfort from having an electric light in your field of vision? Do your eyes become fired more easily at night than in the day time? There are two main ways in which modern lighting is done, directly and indirectly. With indirect lighting the source of Blumination cannot be seen but the light is reflected from the walls and ceiling, but when direct lighting is used the source may be seen. The latter is the more common, If our eyes burt we get a larger globe and move it closer to our work. Theoretically this should be done. But how about experience? It has been proved that after three hours' work the efficiency of the eye is but little less when indirect lighting is used. IMPRISONED BEAR DEALT WITH THREATENED FLOOD. -How intelligent a bear may be is well illustrated by an account published by M. Baudouir in the Bulletin of the French Societe Nationale d'Accitmata tion of a brown specimen that lives in the Jardin des Plantes.

The bear had noticed the whenever there was a heavy fall of rain the lower part of his den was flooded and the orifice by which the water flowed out was obstructed. Whenever this happened he profited by the occasion to take a good bath. This finished, he used to go to the outlet and scrape away the debris that had stopped it up, untll the water flowed out and his home was dry. But once, in an exceptionally heavy flood, the water rose through the hole from outside. The bear tried his usual method of getting rid of the water, but, finding this useless, sat down to think over the new situation Presently an idea came to him.

A lot of rocks had been thrown into his den in an effort to raisethe level of the floor and give him dry quarters. He studied these rocks attentively, and then began carrying them one by one to the place where the water was entering. He tried with these stones to build a dam against the increasing water. After the water receded it was discovered that the hear had placed twenty rocks, weighing from twenty to forty pounds

SED by whist and euchre players to signify a revoke or failure to play a card of the suit called for, the word "renig" is properly spelled "renege" and is the Old English verb meaning to refuse, renounce or deny. It probably crept into whist from the older game of "spotl-five" which, with its variations of "twenty-five" and "forty-five" is still played in the British army and in many parts of Ireland. In this game the player is permitted to renig (or to deny the suit) when holding certain cards. Here the word retains its original meaning, though its synonym "revoke" is not so easy to trace. The word "renege" is twice used by Shakespeare, once in A PEDESTRIAN ONCE. "Anthony and Cleopatra" and once in "King Lear" and is occasionally found in the works of other writers of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries. Chaucer uses the form reneys. evidently from the French re nier which, in turn, is derived
