And so this year, even more war that Memorial day, or Decoration | than last, Memorial day will be a day day as we love to call it, first became on which we will consciously pleage a great American holiday. of the soldier dead in their cemeteries. One by one the state legislatures passed laws making Memorial day (April 30 in some of the southern states) a legal holiday. To us it has been more familiar as a day on which the cemeteries are visited and the graves, not only of the Civil war veterans, but of all the dead, docorated, than as an occasion for great patriotic

Reminiscent of that first Memorial day and the way in which it drew North and South together with the common bond of their dead between them is an incident of how this heliday was observed in France last year. A great cemetery, where simple freshlypainted crosses row on row marked the serried ranks of American sleepers, had been built up near a French village. The simple folk of this village, with their own beautiful but sad Jour des Morts, or annual day of praying for the souls of their dead, had heard that the next day was the day on which Americans honored their lead, so they sent a request to the American hospital not far away, ask-ing doctors, nurses, canteen workers, and patients—all who could—to join them early on the following morning at the entrance to the cemetery just at the edge of the fown,

The camions in which the Americans would have gone were all pressed into emergency service, and when they finally arrived at the cemetery, it was late afternoon. The French came to meet them, disappointed, thinking Here is the design of a monument they had failed to make themselves, erected in Washington, D. C., in memunderstood.
