PROGRESS FULL

Not a Clearance Sale as the term is generally app'ied-but a concerted underpricing of practically everything in our entire stocks of new and seasonable merchandise. The Logical Reason Why we call this yearly event "Inventory Sale" because it is inventory time with us and every department manager in the store is eager to make a satirfactory inventorying of their respective stock and the best way we know of to do this, is to cut prices to the limit throughout the store and create a big volume of business which the splendid values are sure to do. It when one views the changes in fashion in this department of women's attire. the possibilities of variety become perfectly astounding. This year, writes a fashion authority in the New York Times, the gorgeousness of furs and fur trimmings and fur linings appear to know no limitation, and it would seem as though the American woman had decided to be as luxurious and comfortably coated as she could possibly manage to be. Of course, all this has to be judged by what the shops are showing and by what the women are buying. But at the salons of the leading furriers there is nothing to indicate the least falling off of fur buying or a tendency to wear | handsome, not to mention costly, furs A furrier who in the course of his business and become used to the costliness of words as well as to the value of the products which he was selling, said: "Now here is a cheap mink wrap. This is something that we are selling in quantities and which the American women are showing their preference for." "And what is the retall price of that?" said I, hopefully. It looked so much the sort of thing that would complete my dream of life. He scratched his head and pondered for a brief moment. "That," he said. "would retail for only about $3,000." So, there is the standard, if you are thinking about furs, though there are other prices lower on the scale as well as those which some and some until they sound like the figures in a war tonn. Fifty thousand dollars paid for an evening wrap of fur has been known to happen, and not as a single occurrence either, for it has been repeated often.

of economy. It is that caracul wears in tones of gray. Sometimes the hair is very curly and sometimes almost straight, while again it is of that pressed variety so well demonstrated by the American broadtail in all of its expressions. In other words, if you see some fur trimming or a coat of something that looks like fur, then be certain that it is a manner of woolly lamb which has been pressed into the service of fashion,

The pleasantest suits that are lamb trimmed are those with a distinctly Russian flavor. You see the whole idea sprang from the Krimmer inspira tion, and that is the fur of the Russian coats and things in their original state. And the sprightliest parts of these costomes are the high Russian turbans, made entirely of fur and to match the trimmings of the bloused soirs or coats. At a smart resigurant there was seen a coat fitted to the waist with tight sleeves and high colfore and wide ruffs of this gray lamb. It had a flaring skirt that reached the bottom of the dress, where the band of fur was repeated all the way round the circular width of the end of the skirt. There was a bigh and untelmined turban worn with it, and the effect of the whole thing was something to be gloried in because of its complete originality. Of course, baby lamb still holds good as the smartest and by all odds the most expensive of all the lambs. For one of the most . alluring parts of these newer lamb skins is the fact that they do not run into terrifying figures when their prices hang in the balance. For trimming and for a few coats
