THE PROBLEM

THE STEEL INDUSTRY.

The recent report of the Iron and Steel Institute Committee which favored reducing the taxes which are imposed on steel production to facilitate the entry of new producers into the industry is not operating on a twelve-hour basis. The steel industry is so vital to prosperity in the United States that no sensible person can afford to ignore it. The effect that greater production has been secured by the adoption of a more reasonable length of working day, it would seem, therefore, that the iron and steel industry must be given the modern trend of sentiment in this question.

LESS GOVERNMENT.

Defenders of some tax rates usually attempt to justify their position by contending that the government is rendering a greater service and is taxing more heavily than others in order to pay for it. In many instances these extra services are unnecessary or not worth the cost and some are positively injurious to the taxpayer.

As long as the nation is under an industrial civilization minute by minute the lives of individuals and the conduct of every business great and small, the tax burden will be exorbitant.

DANGER FROM ILL.

DEFENSELESS LEGISLATION.

Fire insurance affects directly the protection and credit of every individual.

Representatives of both sides of the question believe that every evil or even practice that they think is evil can be remedied by legislation. They wish to regulate by statute every man and his most remote offshoots. They have piled upon themselves proposals for state and municipal ownership in various fields, and other paternalistic measures are common.

Atmospheric measures are proposed for state and local governments to insure state employees were introduced recently; in Colorado it was urged that the state should write automobile laws for the entire country. Hill was introduced in Massachusetts, where an effort was made to compel insurance companies to invest forty per cent of their premium in dwellings.

In these measures are appearing, but in practice they tend to stifle business. Insurance is the basis of credit. When a man has fire and his property is lost he is left poorer at once. Insurance reserves must be kept in assets that can be turned into cash immediately. If forty per cent of insurance funds were invested in dwellings, a conflagration should strike a community during a period of depression, it would be impossible for the companies to convert their money into cash without sufficient speed to pay insurance claims as promptly as would be desired.

This illustrates an ill-advised measure which would undermine the stability of a business that is vital to the nation.

The Sheriff Let

BY JOHN PALMER

Mr. Trudeau was out of the pen, but he had not left the building. Mr. Trudeau had climbed two walls, unfastened three doors, and broken through the windows of a pectenary workshop, and walked to freedom.

He had broken into a room and taken a suit of clothes, clean collar and cuffs, and the Divisional coat he had worn to his old city haunts—Dear Trudeau, the cleverest burglar!

A cord had been drawn for many miles along the road, and he had been caught with that cord.

Under the Ether Come

By EDWARD LEVINE

"And the doctor says I've got to have ether," said Hester, looking longingly at her husband. "But it will cost me $100. You will soon get over it."

"Well, I'm not so very serious," answered John Merchant, "but of course, at my age, I don't know how she could have kept such youthful bloom so long." Then he added, "I have been married for years; she was still like a girl in her 20s."

"But you're a young man, John," said Hester, "and always will be."

"Not we," said Hester firmly.

"How do you know?" asked John.

"I am a very young matron. Long before, so long that it is only now that I have had another woman."
