EASY TO BE SMART IF YOU USE ALL YOUR BRAINS, SAYS

London, Sept. 1.—No matter how smart you are, you can be infinitely smarter if you will learn to use all of your brains. Every one has more brain than he can use and the cerebral cortex in the human brain is the discovery of ways and means of using the talent intelligence now developed.

This fascinating vista of potentialities of human evolution was plotted by Dr. J. Arthur Thompson, noted British biologist, in an interview. Even the cleverest, according to Dr. Thompson, are not as clever as they might be.

"There are," said Dr. Thompson, "about 1,700,000,000 people living in the world today, but man has made more progress in the development of nerve cells in the shallow, convoluted cortex of his forebrain. This multitude includes sensory nerve cells that receive news from the outside world through the skin, eyes, ears, nose, etc., and the executive cells which are the motor nerves in the brain for which no one is known. We cannot suppose that a large quantity of complex, expensive tissue would be allowed to accumulate as useless tissue in the body."

"And so, darling," the British scientist declared, "there seems no chance of improving our intelligence, except by increasing more of the workings of the mind." He justified his claim by pointing out that the development of new brain cells in the cortex of the forebrain is the result of a process of growth, and that the brain grows until it reaches a certain point of development.

Dr. Thompson asserted, in discussing what happens next:

"The first stage of life is to grow.

The three night bazaar of the Ladies Auxiliary to the A. O. H. opened in the Armory last evening and in spite of the intense heat and humidity attended by the visiting orchestra furnished music. In the closing days of the last session of Parliament Sir Montagu

SAMUEL GOMPERS

WILY BOOTLEGGER TWARTS OFFICERS

Humbly Pleads Guilty When Caught and Escapes Lawyer's Fees

Government work of every description is to be accelerated, Sir Montagu said, and every possible instrument given to private enterprise to encourage construction. The railways, for instance, which have reserve funds aggregating $150,000,000, are to be urged to undertake all possible development.

An arrangement to private enterprise the Government has undertaken to bear 50 per cent of the interest charges for five years on all revenue-producing enterprises and 50 per cent of the interest on all non-revenue-producing development work. Government loans or advantageous terms also are to be provided for private industry.

Despite every induction that the Government is likely to give to the needs of the stricken leaders of the Labor Party already have indicated dissatisfaction with the proposals of the Government. The Ruir government would be best when Parliament proposes to undertake a solution that will give us the expanded relief scheme to the extent that will give us the maximum relief.

The prevalence of smuggling in Great Britain frequently has been attributed to the industrial semi-nationalization of Europe, for Britain is the only country in Europe that is not responsible for its own labor.

Captain McGuire says: "The bootlegger apparently has discovered his plan to plead guilty when he can't get the goods on him. We are going to make it difficult for him to do that."
