

MANCHESTER CELEBRATES 100TH ANNIVERSARY

USE DYNAMITE IN KENTUCKY PRISON TO DISLodge FELONS

Spare No Expense On Property Damage to Capture Dead or Alive Three Rebellious Lifers Who Have Held Off Posses and National Guard Troops Armed With Machine Guns—Have Been Fighting Since Wednesday When 3 Guards Were Killed in Attempt to Escape.

LEAD ALL KENTUCKY EDDYVILLE. State Penitentiary, Eddyville, Ky., Oct. 5.—"Spare no expense or property damage," was the message of Governor Morrow which came today with additional national guard troops to the battle now in its third day against three desperate felons barricaded in the dining room of the prison. The building has been seized by machine gun fire in the effort to rout the slavers.

Spare Further Bloodshed. Warden John B. Chilton is anxious that the men be captured without further loss of life and has discouraged suggestions of a charge on the building. The fact that one or more of the trio still may be alive can be laid to the natural advantages of the dining room as a gun shelter. Its large brick backing and huge steel mixing pans might well be used as cover.

May Use Dynamite. Dynamite probably will supplement today the machine gun bullets in drilling a hole six inches square in one side of the foot-thick wall of the convicts' fortress. The 25 National Guardsmen first sent to the prison under command of Captain Allen Radfield will be reinforced today with a squad under the command of Captain Crawford of Mayfield, Ky. Governor Morrow is taking a strong interest in the capture of the rebellious prisoners and personally directed this latest troop movement over the long distance telephone from Pultney, Ky.

"We will get these desperadoes dead or alive today," was Captain Radfield's promise. State Penitentiary, Eddyville, Ky., Oct. 5. (Ina.)—One fallen of the ambitious trio in the battle of the dining hall at the penitentiary—the one who ventured to the door at dusk last night and then dodged back before a burst of machine gun fire poured into the doorway—was believed holding out the siege almost to the today.

Has companions are believed to have fallen before the relentless machine gun attack which has been poured for 48 hours into the building from four corners of the prison enclosure, making a war-scarred paper box of the dining hall. Opening holes in its walls through which tear gas attacks will be renewed today.

Additional state troops from Mayfield today re-enforced the machine gun troops originally assigned to the prison after three guards lives were claimed in the convicts' attempt to shoot their way to freedom Wednesday morning.

One guard was killed outright, two died yesterday from their wounds. Two other wounded guards are expected to recover. Eddyville is in a "frenzy of excitement" tonight, a result of the machine gun fire has beaten its recurrent waves for more than two days on their ears. The prison is a mile from town but the guard of the fire has been plainly audible.

It was rumored today that a regular quest might be made for state tanks, which could be sent to the door of the dining hall, and an even heavier attack could be launched from the fighting tops of the convicts' moving fort.

The resistance of the trio has baffled to an occasional pattern of bullets and a gutter of machine guns. It was rumored today that a regular quest might be made for state tanks, which could be sent to the door of the dining hall, and an even heavier attack could be launched from the fighting tops of the convicts' moving fort.

Manchester City Club Has Big Re-Union Last Evening

One of the best from out of a number of wonderful times was given at the Manchester City Club last evening, the occasion being the re-union of members of the club which brought within the portals of the Oak Street club house more old timers than any occasion since the formal opening on June 15, 1917.

All the old boys were there. Some of them had not been in town since a opening referred to above. Others have not been with in the club rooms for four or five years. That with Manchester's centennial on everybody's mind all over the state and country, apparently, that is, everybody who ever lived in Manchester, there was no trouble rousing the whole gang up.

Edmund A. Rogers, who was the first president of the Manchester City Club, when it was organized in the Parson block in the fall of 1915 was there as toastmaster and he fitted into the place nicely. At the same table were the following: Congressman E. Hart Penn, Mayor Robert V. Treat, William B. Rogers, Judge Raymond A. Johnson, Judge Alexander Arnold, Chief Samuel G. Gordon, of the local police force, Edward Ballester Sr. and last but not least, Laban B. Adams, who was introduced as the "Mayor of Central Village."

After the banquet which was served under the direction of Steward Kingsley Barrows, William B. Rogers introduced his brother, Edward A. Rogers, the first president of the club as toastmaster. Mr. Rogers reviewed the past history of the club, which he said started under humble circumstances and with high hopes for the future.

It was composed mainly of young men who were desirous of seeking some fraternal life outside of organized local fraternities. The first meetings were held in a room rented in the old Ferris block on Main street, now part of the Watkins building. As time went on more members were attracted until the quarters became too small and the present quarters were leased and furnished completely through the active endeavor of the small nucleus of those who had formed the Manchester City Club.

The toastmaster reviewed the opening night at the club when as guest of honor, Lieutenant Governor Clifford Wilson was present. The club managed to keep going through the dark and gloomy days of the war and many of its members answered the call of service. Now that it had gathered practically all of the storm, brighter days were ahead and it was the sincere wish of the old timers that the young bloods keep up the work which had been brought to such a fine standard.

Congressman E. Hart Penn, of Waterford, in answer to the toastmaster's introduction said that he was pleased to be a guest of the Manchester City Club on such an auspicious occasion. Manchester had always stood high among the towns and cities in Connecticut and he looked around the room and saw so many live-wires present he could read the reason for Manchester's progressiveness.

Chairman Robert V. Treat of the Board of Selectmen of Manchester was called upon and he extended his sincere appreciation for his invitation to be present. Being a Manchester man, he was naturally proud of Manchester's excellent schools and institutions and he felt that the City Club filled a distinct place in the life of the town.

100 GUN SALUTE OPENS MONSTER CARNIVAL OF JOY AND HAPPINESS

Greetings From Lord Mayor of Manchester, England Read at Centennial Grounds This Morning—Chairman Treat's Reply Cabled Overseas—Town Decked Out in Flags and Bunting for Biggest Celebration in History—5,000 Local People to March in Historical Parade This Afternoon—1,000 Actors to Depict in Song and Story Tale of Manchester in Pageant at Centennial Grounds Tonight—Program of Three-Day Affair.

Manchester's day of days is here. The monster celebration for which hundreds of thousands of the inhabitants of this pretty Southern New England town have been looking forward to since a move was first made in September, 1921, by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce has arrived and promise of blue skies and fair weather greeted early risers today who simply could not sleep for the waiting for it.

The mecca of all Manchester this morning was the Centennial Grounds on East Center street where Manchester Centennial was officially declared opened by Frank Cheney Jr., chairman of the general committee in a few well chosen words. Following the speaking program, in which Mr. Cheney read a message from the Lord Mayor of Manchester, William Curdell, to which Chairman Robert V. Treat, of the Board of Selectmen of Manchester, responded, the nine hundred Magisterial reverberated to the sound of a 100 gun salute which roused even the late sleepers from the bed to the realization that the great day had finally dawned and Manchester is ready to outdo herself in hospitality, good cheer and joy in the greatest event in the history of the town's 100 years of existence.

Manchester Grand Present. The Centennial grounds were crowded with throngs to witness the official opening which took place in the newly constructed band-stand with its immense sounding board in the southwest corner of the old golf grounds. A great cheer went up as the general committee, accompanied by Chairman Robert Treat, took their places.

Frank Cheney Jr., chairman of the executive committee was then introduced to the present and he read a message carried from the Lord Mayor of Manchester, England, by Earl L. G. Hobsbawm, who stated in that city last month. The message was in the form of a letter written to Mr. Hobsbawm and was as follows:

My dear Sir, I am glad of having the opportunity of seeing you during your visit to this city. Coming as you do from a town of the same name in the United States, you have given me a special interest in you and the progress of your fellow townsmen and I shall be glad if you will take back with you 100 letters of greeting to my friends and best wishes for their future happiness and prosperity from the citizens of Manchester. Our language and ideals are the same and this I venture to think assures the friendship and goodwill of each community. May it continue to be the ardent prayer of my fellow citizens.

Yours faithfully, W. CURDLIFF Lord Mayor. E. L. G. Hobsbawm Esq., Manchester, U. S. A. Chairman Robert V. Treat of the Board of Selectmen, when an official head of the town this message was given them replied: Manchester, Connecticut is proud of her descent from Manchester in England and it is with pride in her own achievements that Manchester, Connecticut sends greetings to Manchester, England on this auspicious occasion. For a long time places have been going forward to make this celebration one of the greatest in the history of the town.

The day of fulfillment has arrived. The city of fulfillment has arrived. I heartily welcome all who have come from far distances to be the guests of Manchester today. In the evening the Centennial open. 100 Gun Salute. Mr. Treat had scarcely finished speaking when the roar of 100 aerial bombs split hills and valleys of Manchester. One another another the mighty explosions rent the atmosphere. The crowd cheered lustily.

It was a great re-union, the first since 1917 but indicative of many others in the future. The program was reviewed by the Board of Selectmen also spoke briefly reviewing some of the old days in Manchester. The address by Edward Ballinger Sr. was easily the masterpiece of the evening. Comparing the growth of the town as communities to the youth of man's life Mr. Ballinger said "As many travel along the road of life few milestones in his career. At each of them, if he is a thinking man, he stops and ponders a while and then grinding up his heels, he passes on with high hopes for the future, holding his life's work upon the shoulders of the past. It is the same with a town or community. Manchester is paving its first mile."

S. M. H. S. RE-UNION PROVES BIG SUCCESS LAST EVENING

Last night was a notable occasion in the history of the South Manchester High School Alumni for coincident with the Manchester Centennial nearly 600 graduates of the town's only high school were present at a banquet and re-union in Cheney Hall, which like the Manchester Centennial itself attracted 600 timers from all parts of the country.

It was a most successful affair, the first since the school was founded in 1863. The occasion was a most successful one, the first since the school was founded in 1863. The occasion was a most successful one, the first since the school was founded in 1863.

HARVEY WANTS TO GET BACK IN TIME TO PREPARE FOR ELECTION

London, Oct. 5.—The outstanding love of politics is such that he desires to be on the ground when the Col. George Harvey as ambassador "picking days" begin. It will be recalled that Colonel Harvey's voice played an important part in the selection of Harding at Chicago in 1920.

Colonel Harvey himself is not talking about his future plans, except to say that his "private business" needs his attention. He recently told friends: "When I quit the embassy I am going to return to my own profession—writing. History perhaps."

London newspapers took the news of Ambassador Harvey's resignation calmly. It apparently created no great impression here. The colonel had made a great success of his London post in the mail he has been too outspoken to be a great popular figure with all continental themselves and in the English as was the late Walter Hines Pige.

It is even probable that high officials of the British government are rather sorely pleased at the going of the picturesque colonel. Some of the colonel's methods of diplomacy have merited the description of "rough shod." Much so that the English would welcome an ambassador from the United States who would not tread so heavily upon custom and precedents next year. The Colonel's dent.
