TOWN AND

GARBAGE PROBLEM

Civic pride and public spirit are essential on the part of the citizenship of a town, it is a truism to profess and the greater the quality of town, the more the quality of town. In the final analysis, a town is no better, no worse, no healthier, no more or less a town of its citizenship. Manchester has been fortunate in her citizens. There has been a genuine approval in no small measure to the accomplishment of many things which have been done in this city. Civic pride in their town, Manchester as a town may well be proud of her citizens. And it is not only her citizens, but her town, that she should be proud of. It is not only her citizens, but her town, that she should be proud of. It is not only her citizens, but her town, that she should be proud of.

COVER THE DRY BROOK

The suggestion by Colonel William C. Cheney, one of Manchester's most progressive citizens and former member of the board of directors of the Manchester Water Company, to cover the Dry Brook, is a timely one. The brook, which flows through the city, is a source of pride and pleasure to many of its residents. It is a source of pride and pleasure to many of its residents. It is a source of pride and pleasure to many of its residents.

LOOKING BACKWARD

The old Cheney block at Main and Central streets was destroyed by fire about the year 1870. It was a fine building, and it was a source of pride and pleasure to many of its residents. It is a source of pride and pleasure to many of its residents. It is a source of pride and pleasure to many of its residents.
