Jerry Dwyer, former Manchester resident and a memper of the Manchester Klondike party that left here January 24, 1898, to seek gold in the Alaska River country from whom no word has been received for the past 25 years, has been positively located by the Manchester Daily News hrough a magazine article published fast month which told of an old Alaskan "sour-dough" named "Jerry Dwyer," a picturesque figure who was persuaded to bring his dog-team to Southern California, there to carry the mail across Kaiser Range to the camps of the marooned tunnel workers on the Florence Lake project who spend their winters behind miles of drifted snow.
