THERE'S many a story a woman can hide-and I many a one she does. But the story of her indifference as a housewife will be only too plainly reflected in her personal appearance. If she uses a poor household soap, her red, rough and coarse looking hands will reveal her carelessness.

Careful, intelligent housewives know this and are as particular about the kind of household soap they use as they are about their toilet soap. Such women always insist upon Kirkman's Soap. They know that Kirkman's is as harmless to their hands and to delicate fabrics as the most exquisite toilet soap.

AS your grocer can tell you, Kirkman's Soap is not only free from irritating lye, but is made of the purest and finest materials. This pure soap gives a thorough washing energy for every household and laundry purpose.

For the sake of your hands insist upon Kirkman's.

3. Uncle Wiggily and Nurse Jane pulled Baby Bunty out of the dye pan, and the poor thing was all blue. "Never mind," said Uncle Wiggily, "it will wash off after a while. Now sit in your high chair, Bunty, until I finish coloring these other eggs." While Bunty was drying in her chair, in came Floppy Twistytaii. "Oh, I want to see what color this is!" squealed the piggie boy, pulling at a pan on the table.

4. "Let that pan alone, Floppy!" advised Uncle Wiggily. "But I want to see what color it is," squealed the little piggie boy. And just then Bunty, up in her high chair, shouted: "Oh, he's going to see all right—just like I did!" And, as truly as I'm telling you, Floppy pulled a lot of red dye all down over himself. "Oh, what a day this is going to be for Easter Sunday!" gasped Uncle Wiggily. "Oh! Oh!"

5. Nurse Jane came in and helped to dry Floppy. "I think you have colored enough eggs—and children—for one day," said the muskrat lady. "I think so," spoke Mr. Longears. "Now I'll put the eggs away until Easter morning." He piled the eggs on a platter. Floppy and Baby Bunty sat on the floor to play. "Don't get in Uncle Wiggily's way, children!" called Nurse Jane. "No'm, we won't!" they said.

6. Of course Bunty and Floppy didn't mean to have anything happen, but it did, all the same. Along walked Uncle Wiggily to put the eggs away when, all of a sudden, he tripped and fell! Right over Bunty and Floppy he fell! Oh!" gasped Floppy. "Oh, dear!" signed Bunty. "Oh, dear me!" shouled the rabbit. "I don't know what I would do if Easter came more than once a year." How the eggs rolled!

7. While this was going on inside the stump bungalow, on the outside was the Alligator and the Fox. "We must catch Uncle Wiggily this time, sure!" barked the Fox. "I'm with you!" gargied the 'Gator. "Look," went on the Fox. "We'll hide behind that sheet on the line. When the door opens we'll slip in and catch the rabbit. Come on, Mr. Alligator; we'll hide behind the sheet!" On walked the bad chaps.

8. With Nurse Jane's help, Uncle Wiggly picked up Bunty and Floppy and set them in chairs. "Now don't move until I clean up this mess?" warned Nurse Jane. "I can save some of the eggs," spoke Uncle Wiggly. "They aren't all broken." He picked them up and put them on the table. "I'll throw out the red and blue dye; I've finished using it," he said. And out of the window he tossed the pretty colors.

9. Not knowing the sheet was hanging on the line, Uncle Wiggily threw the red and blue dye all over it. And the blowing wind splashed the dye on the white sheet, making red and white strips and many stars. When the Fox and Alligator saw that the sheet looked like a flag they cried: "We'd better run! Uncle Wiggily must have some soldiers in his bungalow!" And run away they did, while the bunny laughed.

And if the apple pie doesn't get so proud that it wen't sit next to the bread and butter in the movies, the next story and pictures will be about UNCLE WIGGEY IN THE PERATES' CAVE.
