Have You Pictured Your Friend As Executor?

If you intend naming your friend or relative as executor-trustee of your estate, have you pictured some of the problems he will have to solve?

Your business is successful now, while you are here to run it. Could your friend run it as well? Your real estate-would he know how to manage it. when to sell, when to hold for increased value -so that your family would receive the maximum benefit?

Naming a friend or relative as executor is in most cases not properly providing for the future of one's family. Executorship is a job for experts-it is work for a trust company. because it brings to such problems the business judgment and sound counsel of many minds experienced in many fields.

ALL CENSORSHIP IS SILLY

The senate of the New York legislature has passed a bill repealing motion picture censorship in that state. Motion picture censorship, foolish efforts to enforce it, is nothing new. It would treat the motion picture, the greatest modern educating force, as the printing press was treated three hundred years ago. In Cromwell's day they had censors of the printing press. If you wanted to print a book you had to submit it to the official censors and let them kill it, or cut it to pieces. Then you had to file a copy of it at Stationer's Hall. If it passed with everybody's approval you might print it.

Busybodies felt that they ought to decide what others might print; that their judgment was reliable, that of others, not.

But, fortunately, there were some powerful men living in Cromwell's day. One of them, Milton, printed his book on divorce, defying censorship, ignoring the Stationers' Hall. Then he wrote his magnificent appeal for free printing, without censorship or interference, and printed the "Arcopagetica" regardless of the censors. He had power enough to carry it through. And, although they didn't repeal the law, they didn't bother him or dare prosecute him, and censorship of the printing press was a dead letter.

The way to kill stupid censorship is to fight it. Busybodies are cowards.
