. . . From the Designer for June we ake the following quotation on "What a Woman's Clothes Should Cost a Yea. "

"Various "best minds" have from time to time set themselves the generally thankless task of laying down the law in the matter of how much a woman should spend for clothes, but we have had access to some department-store figures on the subject which seem to have been more carefully prepared than next, and which are summarized here for what they may be worth; to readers who will welcome any reasonable basis for comparison with their own expenditures. The figures before us indicate that $100 a year is the least a woman can spend on clothing and $200 a year | Wilde, chorus beauty the minimum on which she can naintain a smart appearance. proposition that when business is not all that might be desized, and increased selling effort is called for, increased advertising effort is naturally indicated.

This does not necessarily mean larger advertisements or more frequent insertions, though they are desirable. It may mean only the wiser use of the advertising appropriation in the matter of mediums and copy.

There never was a better time to cultivate assiduously the field covered by The Manchester Daily News.

SITTING ON THE VALVE

You hear very frequently that man is "just a machine," a sort of engine that keeps going when the fuel, which is food is given him. But a man is more than an engine; he thinks for himself, which an engine does not. And whereas more work may be had from an engine by forcing, by sitting on the safety valve, it is not at all true in every instance that men respond to forcing, to compelling. Ofter they break loose when there is too much repression.

Too many efforts to control, to say "Thou shalt," and "Thou shalt not," cause men to say "I will not," and "I will," in the wrong place. Which is a very good thing for professional reformers to remember. Their object should be the descrt of Asia. In this same descrt Andrews, on an earlier expedition, found the bones of prehistoric animals and the giant eggs of the dinosaur. It is on the finding of the dinosaur eggs that he mainly bases his hope of finding the original man within the next five years.

There have been skulls, jaws, bones, skeletons and fossils of early man found in many parts of Europe and Asia, giving an almost unbroken knowledge of man's existence and development since about 550,000 R.C. but the archaeologics.

Party lines were hopelessly acrambled in this fight, which resulted in an authorization for employment of outside counsel.

Since it was the proposal to employ outside counsel that drew a heated protest from Mellon to Coollidge and a caustic letter of criticism of the Senate from the president of the senate finance committee and in charge of the formulation, in the senate of all war revenue measures.

Note of all war revenue measures.

INTEREST here now centers in what "Cautious a Cal" will do when the tax bill, providing for surfax rates hitterly opposed by Mellon and objected to by Coollidge.
