And you hear my words? If you're good at all you'll stand up before Miss Blithe because she's a good mother for a famous star. She's made up for a famous star.

"She's dropped everything and simply rushed to help her off with a perfectly mismatch bunch of ornaments, and darling things had to be done."

"'Tis simply a rag," she declared, holding out her hand to Miss Blithe. "I've got to get up early this morning to get rid of it."

When they arrived at the top of the hill, he said to the boy, "In a minute, I'll give you a good idea."

"I'm not too deep in the bushes," he said, "but there was a maid, and she was carrying a darling necklace, and the house was full of ribbons and bows."

"I do you know?" he asked, "that Mrs. Black wears a necklace?"

"Well, he said, 'Go ahead' with it—you're sure to find some fool heads on the way to give you a hand."

"I did," he said, "and I found her."

"Then what did the big bally say?"

"Well, he said, 'Go ahead' with it—you're sure to find some fool heads on the way to give you a hand."

LITTLE LEISURE

Although we all, with Sanchez Panza, pray that blessings may light on him who first invented sleep, it is a time-expensive invention. A London statistician has found that one-third of our lives is spent in sleep. Sleep denies us the privilege of enjoying a third of our lives, because we can not sleep to enjoy sleep except in anticipation.

Sleep is then the largest consumer of "the days of our years," with the work day largest. We can accept the statistician's statement that we sleep and work two days out of every three of life's span. A third is left for education, eating, recreation, reading and the scores of other duties and demands of life.

With so little time unoccupied by work and sleep, fortunate are those who find in their business in life their joy and the development of their spiritual, intellectual and even physical strength; but millions do not find all this development. If they have it, outside of their vocations, since their time is a luxury, it requires only routine attention, and does not give them even the satisfaction in the finished product. Yet with the time shortened hours of labor than have been given a greater amount of spare time in which to devote themselves to the things that make for the cultivation of their moral selves.

The one thing of greatest value that machines have given is better relief from back-breaking labor, is spare time. They receive some of the time exacted by sleep. They give daily to millions a free time which is as long as the work time or the sleep time. The working days of our years are lengthened a cent, and if by reason of strength they be more, they still leave another score of years in which to "approach perfection" in the use of the time devoted to studies, idling, walking, playing and reading. For the many who have to spend eight hours a day at labor merely to earn a living, the right use of leisure time thus becomes quite the most serious problem in personal as well as social progress.

FREEDOM OF LITERATURE

The General Federation of Women's Clubs has completed a survey of the literary wants of the two million women members of its component parts with no other result than to add greater force to the slogan "You can not please everybody all of the time." In fact, the survey discloses that the nation's club women themselves can not agree upon what they want to read.

The manifest intent of this literary survey was to seek reform and uniformity in the publishing business. The federation set out to learn what the American woman wanted to read, with the perfectly logical purpose of making the publishers give it to her. The survey will prove of little value for its original purpose since it produced as many different literary tastes as there were women.

It is selfishly vain for any group or class to conspire for the suppression or influencing of current literature. In the first place, the publishers, who are in the business of meeting the reading demands of the public, have more efficient and accurate means than any private group of ascertaining those demands. And in the second place, one class of group of people can not ethically attempt to dictate what other groups shall read. There should be as much freedom of literature as of religious worship.

The survey of the federation of women's clubs supplied some interesting information on feminine literary tastes, but the infallible law of supply and demand as it applies to literature can not be improved upon. The publishers are in the business of printing books they can sell. Free men and women are not compelled to read them nor should they be prevented from reading them. The great mass of readers will decide by their favor or disfavor what books shall be published or withdrawn from publication.

PUBLIC INTEREST PARADE

On June 16, Duluth, Minnesota, will vote on an ordinance regulating bus traffic by keeping it off streets already provided with electric car service.

While the advantage of the bus under proper conditions is recognized, the traffic problem is so complicated when great buses run on streets used by street cars and other vehicles that necessity forces action on the matter.

Youngstown, Ohio, has recently, by a general vote of the people, eliminated the bus from the congested streets already served by a satisfactory street car system.

The fact is recognized that a city without a street car system to connect its widely scattered sections would be rapidly crippled. If buses are allowed to take the cream of the short hand traffic, it is only a question of time until the suburbs are without satisfactory transportation facilities.

Youngstown recognized the real public interest in this matter when it cast its vote. It will be interesting to watch the action of Duluth.

Distance lends enchantment to a summer resort.

Our girls are the girls are shocking because the men are so anxious to act as shock absorbers.

Young girls in all the graduating class anything has an abundance and all the graduating class anything has an abundance.

Dr. Frank Crane's Daily Editorial

By DR. FRANK CRANE
DOGS

In a conversation with a naturalist who is of considerable standing, but for obvious reasons desires to remain nameless, he expressed the following sentiments:

"The dog is no more than a degenerate wolf. When men found a litter of wolf whelps they killed off those that were independent enough to stand and fight, and preserved those that fawned and cringed.

"These they took home and bred. The result was the dog, who is essentially a coward.

"He is not only a coward, but he is a killer. More human lives are taken every year by the dogs than have been taken by wild beasts since the beginning of the country.

"Every dog feels the impulse to kill. He becomes a killer.

"He will not kill an opponent who will stand up and fight him, but he kills everything that runs away, including chickens, ducks, geese and sheep.

"Some of the wild beasts will kill sheep and horses, but most of these animals that are killed are killed by dogs.

"The list of diseases that are communicated from man to man are numerous, including the tape worm.

"Every woman who lets a dog lick the face of her child, or hands, is inviting some of these diseases.

"Most of the itch that humans being have comes from dogs.

"I know I am up against a sentiment, and therefore cannot speak freely and authoritatively, for a sentiment is hard to combat.

"The reason most men like dogs is because dogs are loyal to them and afraid of them. Other wild animals, however, would be just as loyal and not so dangerous.

"In almost every instance of a wild animal destroying human life, the wild animal had the rabies, that is, he had been bitten by a dog.

We have waged war for many years against the cat as a destroyer of wild life, and somebody ought to arise who is of sufficient consequence to cultivate a public sentiment against the dog, for he is equally as dangerous as the cat, if not more dangerous.

"At least, the movement to muzzle dogs during the summer time should meet the hearty approval of everyone.

"Burglar alarms are a guarantee of protection almost as good as dogs; and they have this advantage, that they do not bite.

Hunt's Washington Letter

BY HARRY B. HUNT
NATIONAL EDITOR

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The rough and rocky road which must be traversed by the Democratic National Convention to reach the White House is likely to be long and tortuous, according to the Washington Correspondents. The difficulties will be aggravated after a hot day's ride regarding the nomination of a candidate for president which will impede progress at the New York meeting.

Chances are that the party probably will be great travelers. These subjects of concern are generally most unfortunate in their undertakings.

With 180 votes to 125 in the convention, this means a minimum of 72 must be brought together before a nomination. This is 18 more than the number of delegates to be elected at the next national convention.

More than one-third of the delegates to the national convention will be from the states which have not yet voted.

Alabama leads the list in this respect with a total of 227. Of this number, however, only 111 are pledged to a single candidate and this will be either in the form of a straight or a divided vote.

Michigan leads the list in the number of unpledged delegates, with 111.

The remaining 225 votes will be cast by 11 favorite son delegates, as follows:
